

SENIORS ADVENTURE (Valid 1 April, 2016 to 31 March, 2017)

The windblown sand dunes of Stockton Bight comprise the largest sand mass on coastal eastern Australia. The dune mass moves westerly at a rate of up to 10 meters per year on average.

Aboriginal ties are still inextricably connected to the land through totems, physical mediums etc. The descendants today, still live in the Port Stephens area as they continue to carry out the rights and responsibilities as traditional custodians of land. The Worimi people are the traditional land owners of the Stockton Bight sand dunes and ecosystem and have left a legacy of historical sites as a testament to their ties within the area. The kinship ties promote the legacy that still lives on in the Worimi community today.
